Bikes, waveboards most dangerous rides

By Jocelyn R. Uy

MOTORCYCLES and waveboards are the most dangerous (overwhelmed) rides in the country, the Department of Health (DOH) yesterday said. A waveboard is a variant of the skateboard highly popular among young children.

The DOH said that of the more than 100,000 injuries reported last year, motorcycles and waveboards were the most common.

EL SALVADOR leader Mario Velasco must have grown up never with the devil, but the Commission on Audit (COA) was up to it.

The COA said that the acquisition by Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corp. (Pagcor) of 66 condominium units in Pateros worth P267.01 million in 2008, purportedly for its employees, was not only unnecessary but also wasteful.

BAGUIO CITY—Super-typhoon 'Juan' roared through Isabela on Monday, flattening banana plantations, uprooting trees, toppling power lines and forcing the evacuation of more than 3,000 people in the province and nearby Cagayan.

At least four people were reported killed in the typhoon's path.

"We were awakened inside our home. We cannot go out. The winds and rain are very strong. Many trees are being uprooted or snapped in half," reported Maria Jose, a resident of Aragon town, Isabela, told INQUIRER.

Peak sustained winds of 225 kilometers per hour and gusts of 260 kph, Juan made landfall in northern Luzon's Isabela at 11:25 a.m.

Weather forecast officials said Juan was the deadliest on record typhoon this year. It is also the strongest storm to hit the Philippines since Super-typhoon 'Yanagi' struck the island region in 1994.

A video clip released by the agency, Pateros, in Pangasinan, said Juan has been confirmed to be the first landfall of the super-typhoon.

A spokesman of the Philippine Red Cross said at least 3,000 people have been evacuated.

THIS Nasa satellite image, taken and released on Oct. 17, shows Super-typhoon 'Juan' before it made landfall in northern Luzon.

Reduced rice output seen

A FLOOD of calamity was declared in Isabela province yesterday after Super-typhoon 'Juan' made landfall and threatened to wipe out the region's rice crop.

The super-typhoon is expected to cause a power shortage in northern Luzon in the short term. By the end of the year, however, the country is expected to suffer "reduced" rice output due to the projected damage caused by the super-typhoon in major rice-producing areas.

Palace: P-Noy can amnesty criminals

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

A TOP Malacanan association yesterday told members that President Aquino could grant amnesty even to "apolitical" offenders, such as ordinary criminals.

"I think that the amnesty power of the President has evolved through the years and, theoretically, the President can grant an amnesty proclamation even for ordinary criminals," Senior Deputy Executive Secretary Jose Azarado said at a hearing of the Senate committee on rules and on peace, unification and reconciliation.

Azarado was responding to a query of Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile, who wanted to get his personal opinion on whether the President could grant amnesty to people "now languishing in Manila jails in order to reduce the congestion in Manila jails."

Enrile said that the President could decide to free all convicts jailed for minor crimes in order to cut the prison population instantly.

PNP warns of rise in kidnaps

By Elizabeth Reyes

POLICE AUTHORITIES have warned against a rise in kidnapping cases as the year ends draws.

Natino Supo, Insular Security Chief of the Police Anti-Gang and Emergency Response (Pang), said reports in Gang Units that there was usually an increasing incidence of the crime toward the Christmas season, or from September to December.

"That is a common apprehension and is not too far from the truth in PNP. And we have to be vigilant in our approach for the Christmas season," he said.

In Laguna and the Visayas, a total of 19 KPN incidents have been recorded since the start of the year until the end of September, including the deaths of 29 gang members, Pang said.

Last year the unit listed 15 KPN incidents in the two areas. Pang said that for last year the crime reduction rate was 33 percent.

Pang explained that KPN incidents in Christmas season are usually related to the fact that there were mostly related to "acts of terrorism."

The Pang said also said incidents might have increased Christmas-Epiphany in various KPN groups. Last year, two incidents were kidnapped.

Pang said that while there is a common belief that the kidnapping of children has increased in the Christmas season, the police are not sure if this is the case. Pang said that the police are not sure if this is the case.

He stressed the need for the community and the police to be more vigilant and proactive in doing kidnapping incidents. "We need to upgrade the community awareness and we need to ask for community support in our fight against kidnapping," he said.

He advised potential victims to be careful with neighbors or strangers who, in most cases, would not be figures of kidnapping.

The crime justifies, he stated in his words that crime could be avoided by... kidnapping. Don't show your... defense. You might become a victim target," Pang said.

Who is misdeclaring the facts?

The Bureau of Customs (Customs) filed a complaint against officers and employees of Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corporation (Shell) last week, alleging that the latter intentionally misdeclared its 2005-2009 Catalytic Cracked Gasoline (CCG) and Light Catalytic Cracked Gasoline (LCCG) importations by using the tariff heading "Tetrapropylene" to evade the payment of the proper taxes and duties. Worse, Customs officials held a press conference and distributed media releases, where it publicly accused Shell of "technical smuggling" and made it appear that Shell evaded the payment of excise taxes and the VAT thereon.

To shed light on these baseless charges, we wish to share more salient facts about this issue:

- Firstly, as a responsible corporate citizen, Shell has paid all appropriate taxes and duties on all its imports. Even if the tariff heading number of tetrapropylene (2710.11.30) was used for CCG/LCCG importations, Shell consistently declared that the product imported was CCG/LCCG in the documents it submitted to Customs. Customs then reviewed and assessed proper tariffs and taxes to be paid by Shell, based on the product declaration of CCG and LCCG. Therefore, Shell accordingly paid the tariff duty assessed by Customs and as such, there was never any revenue loss to the government since it collected either the higher duty of 3% or the relevant tariff rate for CCG and LCCG based on the applicable Executive Orders;
- Secondly, and more importantly, there were no excise taxes due on these 2005-2009 CCG and LCCG imports since each importation is covered by a Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) directive to the Customs not to assess Shell excise taxes on these imports. CCG and LCCG are not subject to excise taxes, since these are not final products but raw materials used by Shell's refinery to produce Clean Air Act compliant petroleum products. From 2004 until December 2009, the BIR did not assess excise taxes on these imported raw materials upon importation, but collected the excise taxes from Shell upon the withdrawal of the finished products from Shell's refinery.

The issue of double taxation, i.e., whether CCG and LCCG imports are excisable by Customs upon importation, in addition to BIR assessment upon withdrawal of the finished products, is already pending before the Court of Tax Appeals [CTA].

Based on the above, it is very clear that Customs Commissioner Angelito Alvarez has been misled by holdovers from the previous administration to believe that:

- Shell committed fraud by misdeclaring its CCG/LCCG importations;
- There was evasion of the payment of taxes and loss of revenue to government; and
- The facts of this criminal complaint are different from the current case pending in the CTA.

We view this development as reinforcement of President Aquino's assessment that the biggest challenge facing his administration is trying "to replace a system that has been in the country in its worst form for practically the last 10 years".

Shell has always acted according to its business principles, and has built and protected its reputation for many years. Accordingly, we will be filing cases for gross negligence, gross incompetence, and defamation against those who had misled this government.

Shell, however, remains hopeful and committed to help the present administration in the continued fight to change the system and to expose corrupt and incompetent government officials.

SOLIDARITY FOR SOVEREIGNTY

TRUTH - JUSTICE (S4S) PEACE - DEVELOPMENT

I. Clarion Call: Appropriate Response by the Military for Sovereignty (A4S)

We are a sovereign nation-state, but our sovereignty is fractured and derogated. Our more than 300 revolts, our 1896 revolution, our early struggles against the American colonizers and Japanese invaders, were all attempts to achieve full sovereignty. We count 112 years after our June 12, 1898 Independence but much is still wanting in our sovereignty which is an essential element of STATE.

The Solidarity for Sovereignty (S4S) therefore calls on all sovereign loving Filipinos to join us in making sovereignty a full reality in our country. We particularly ask our military, the Armed Forces of the Philippines, to fulfill its constitutional mandate toward this end immediately and support them when they do.

II. Contemporary Events Impinging On Our Sovereignty

1. The Unconstitutionality of the May 10, 2010 National Elections

Our Constitution mandated the Comelec with plenary powers to conduct elections. These powers are exclusive and non-delegable. But Comelec sourced out and contracted away to Smartmatic-TIM, a foreign corporation, the conduct of the last elections thereby making it unconstitutional. Further the electoral exercise violated the sovereign will of our people as PCOS machines that did not adhere to our laws and regulations determined the election outcome over the actual votes of our people resulting in a digital president all the way to the last mayor. Therefore there exists today a real vacuum in all elective positions. This crisis must be immediately addressed by the sector of government which has been mandated by the Constitution under Section 3 Art. 2 "to protect the people and the State" and "to secure the sovereignty of our State."

2. The Unnecessary International Tragedy That Was The Hostage Incident

The recent hostage fiasco that was preventable but ended in the deaths of eight foreign nationals highlighted the extreme incompetence of the present leadership. This ineptitude is even provoking some of our big industrialists to sell and transfer their businesses here to greener pastures abroad. The hostage debacle also dealt a big blow to our tourism industry. There is even talk of boycotting Philippine goods. Worse, it has imperiled our sovereignty. Because of the fatal mistake by the present top governance our country has been humiliated before the citizens of Hong Kong, China and even the whole world so much so it has bowed to international pressure to apologize to the country of the victims. We are a sovereign nation and we should have expressed our regrets but not apologized. From hereon we shall remain internationally defensive unless those stupidly responsible for the hostage disaster leave their positions and the Filipino people exact a fresh start in leadership and governance.

3. Plagiarism By The Supreme Court

The Supreme Court is considered as the last bulwark of democracy and justice in any nation. How can it remain so if it is currently under fire for plagiarizing the works of foreign authors. It appears that the questionable decision of the Supreme Court even went against our own comfort women who were violated by Japanese rapists and invaders in the last world war. By acts of dishonesty the Supreme Court has weakened our sovereignty. It has lost its integrity and with the respect and trust of the people gone, how can it continue to provide clarity to the direction our country must take especially with regards to our sovereignty or our right to self-determination. The Judiciary has lost their credibility and those culpable must make the extreme sacrifice of resignation to restore decency and integrity in the Supreme Court.

4. RH Bill as a Condition for $434M Grant

The much vaunted $434M grant that the Philippines received during the last trip of Noyonoy Aquino to the United States was given with strings attached, one of which was the passage of the Reproductive Health Bill. It is a clear impingement on our sovereignty. The RH Bill is an apparent effort on the part of its sponsors and adherents to control population in the Philippines. Population control however is not a religious issue. It is an economic policy issue. It is easier to distribute condoms and pills than to provide jobs and industrial development. Culling human population is Malthusian and destructive of the true source of creativity and economic growth which must be based on pro-Filipino and patriotic economic policies not those imposed by foreign interests.

5. Marginalization of the AFP via a via Territorial Sovereignty

Our Constitution has defined our national territory. Recent statements expressed by the government reveal its powerlessness in dealing with nearby countries with respect to territorial claims. Administration allies have even suggested a marginalized AFP whose remaining task shall be dealing with calamities while our regional neighbors are beefing up their defense because of regional security concerns. We are further alarmed in the redefinition of our territory that allows our internal waters to be open to navigation by foreign ships a matter of right. The new Baseline Law degrades our territorial sovereignty over the Kalayaan Island Group. Meanwhile the Bangsa Moro question cavalierly overlooked by Malacañang is a smoldering social volcano about to explode. We cannot afford dismemberment in Mindanao. Thus these concerns must be immediately addressed by our national leaders and the AFP who under Art 2 Sec 3 of our Constitution is mandated "to protect the people and the State" and to be true to its "goal to secure the sovereignty of the State and the integrity of the national territory."

III. Declaration Of Principles

1. We believe that sovereignty, or the right to self-determination, resides in the people and all government authority emanates from them.
2. We believe in the sovereignty of the Filipino people and the declaration of independence of the Republic of the Philippines on June 12, 1898.
3. We believe in the Philippine Constitution and the Rule of Law.
4. We believe in the historic mission of the Philippine Revolution and we will continue to do our share in the struggle to complete its unfinished tasks towards the greatness of the Filipino nation.
5. We believe in the sanctity of human life and the right to life of the unborn. We likewise believe in building a just, humane and moral society.
6. We believe that our people created government to serve our supreme interests, conserve and develop our patrimony, and secure for ourselves and our posterity the blessings of sovereignty and democracy.
7. We believe in economic sovereignty. In the light of the ongoing disintegration of the global economy and financial system, the government must address its devastating impact on the lives of the Filipino citizenry and take drastic and necessary measures for the survival of our nation.
8. We believe all public officials and employees must serve the people with utmost honesty, integrity, loyalty, responsibility, accountability and efficiency.
9. We believe that the nation's wealth and resources are the lifeblood of the people, the core of sovereignty handed down by our forefathers to sustain and promote the prosperity of the present generations of Filipinos and the generations yet unborn. They shall not be allowed to be squandered and looted by the greed and betrayal by interests alien to the Filipino community.
10. We believe the Armed Forces of the Philippines are the protectors of Filipino sovereignty, and must, at all times, perform their primordial duty to defend it at all cost, against those who have betrayed the public trust and violated our God-given sovereignty.

Development is strongest contraceptive

PROBING AROUND) and some leaders in Congress have opened the public debate on a key issue—the link between population and poverty—which has long been swept under the rug by past governments. What motivates the lack of awareness and care to children, as well as the continued absence of national measures, with the challenges of an exploding population and the proliferation of mega-farms that have turned in poverty? Poor families have more children. These children will receive less education, less healthcare and insufficient "human capital investment" (in the language of economists), this results then in human poverty as well. And this is the cycle continues.

But population size is not the only—or is it mainly—the key factor behind the results.

Inducive growth—the kind of development that benefits all, including the poor—is the extreme version of population growth and poverty: hard when parents are that their children can escape poverty than in-home health and earned child care education, there still will be no stronger incentive for family planning. If poor people are to hope, and if the economy and all our institutions prospered, giving frequency and poverty facts perhaps no amount of family planning could curb population growth. Something a lot better than that policy exists in the United States: "London are great, but actually the world's most effective contraceptive is that it is economic development."

Instead of limiting the discussion and venturing in the realm of conjecture, wouldn't it be better to ask the question, why not engage in a three-hour debate before and choose the discussion which is long overdue? Why not challenge the Trustees and just write in details and submit the same in person and to the industry, which means, for it is not just food, population control?

TWO more police chiefs became the latest casualties of the "one-strike policy" of the Philippine National Police (PNP) against "jueteng."

PNP chief Director General Rodolfo B. de la Rosa ordered the chief of San Pablo City, Laguna, chief of police Insp. Norberto De Castro and Marikina, Laguna, chief of police Senior Insp. Rodolfo Castro. The orders were immediately carried out by PNP branches Taguig commander Chief Insp. Norberto Babilas Jr.

Two other law enforcement officials are on suspension or on leave against the illegal numbers game jueteng, the police officers of San Jose immediately ordered by the PNP leadership.

San Jose said on Oct. 13, the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) staged an operation against jueteng in San Jose City. Thirty persons were arrested and P2,200,000 cash was seized.

PNP, the operation, the PNP chief said De Castro was administratively ordered to leave Manila.

On Oct. 14, the NBI also conducted a raid against jueteng in Marikina where nine persons were arrested.

San Jose said De Castro was ordered the same day by Laguna PNP division Senior Insp. Gilbert Cane.

Babilas also immediately investigated on Taguig officers. "The PNP will continue to implement the one-strike policy against jueteng. We will not tolerate the continuation of jueteng," said PNP spokesman Senior Insp. Aguilera Cane. Within a few months, the police chief of Cebu, Norberto Aguirre, Senior Insp. Dina, Manila, was the first casualty of the PNP's one-strike policy. Later, Laguna, Marikina, and Marikina were also relieved for failing to detect and act on reports of jueteng operations in their areas.

The PNP leadership ordered the one-strike policy after controversial retired Inspector General Rodolfo Babilas Cane Cane revealed that two officials of the Laguna government were receiving jueteng payments.

Aguilera, who has just been in office for three days as the new Calabarzon police director, said it was the first time the PNP ordered the one-strike policy against jueteng.

The Laguna police director said Insp. Leo Lora and Insp. Roberto Mariano resigned the central police force in San Pablo City and Marikina, respectively.

"I had no problem with them. We have to follow orders," De Castro said afterwards for comments.

He added, "The one-strike policy is an NBI (national) operation, provincial director nor have authority." Both were transferred to the Laguna Provincial Police 16 Five Headquarters, awaiting new assignments.

Man killed in freak mishap

By James T. Gani

A MAN was belted in a freak accident in the middle of a heavy downpour in Navotas City on Sunday night.

Resident Pineda, 28, a talent of a garment company in Alibon, Cavite, was walking home at around 10:30 p.m. when lightning struck an electrical pole and set several of the high-voltage wires.

As the wires swung to the ground, some snapped themselves around Pineda's neck, according to PDI (Philippine Daily Inquirer), an investigation of the city police.

As a result, the victim was electrocuted while his head was severed from his body.

A police report said Pineda's head was found a few feet away from his body.

"The voltage was extremely high, not as much as it was raining," Pineda added.

A police officer, who stated, 30, was injured when some wires were hit by lightning, causing him to fall off his vehicle.

Luckily he survived with just a few scratches on his knee and an injured toe.

Pineda said Pineda's body was brought to the Navotas Police Station for autopsy.

Bin Laden living comfortably in Pakistan—CNN

LAHORE—Bin Laden still thrives in Pakistan, living comfortably in a house in northwest Islamabad close to his Japanese cousin al-Zawahiri, CNN on Monday quoted an official as saying.

The Saudi-born militant wanted his Sept. 11 attacks on the United States, since the last several months," said the report on CNN's website.

It also said that al-Qaida member Abu al-Faraj al-Buhārī, who fled to Pakistan after the Sept. 11 attacks, was in Pakistan to help.

"Bin Laden is in good living in a house," the unnamed source has said, "and he is not in any danger."

The official also confirmed the 29-year-old Bin Laden's presence in the cities of Karachi and Lahore in Pakistan, since the last several months," said the report on CNN's website.

It also said the Bin Laden's house is not in any danger, "because of the security of the intelligence services around."

Obamas hit campaign trail to rally Democrats

WASHINGTON—President Barack Obama on Tuesday sought to rally anxious Democrats for the final two weeks of the midterm election campaign, traveling in the heart of the electoral battleground to urge them not to be discouraged. "Don't let them tell you that your change isn't possible," he said, as he urged voters to continue to support their rights with the help of disappointed allies.

Comparing to the first time since the 2000 election with his wife, Michelle, the president visited Cleveland and Columbus to try to build support for Rep. Ted Strickland, an Ohio, one of the embattled Democratic incumbents for governing and to raise money while making the case for Democratic incumbents. The trip followed visits to Massachusetts on Tuesday and Delaware on Friday—the last of two states in which Obama's record is being tested in the Nov. 2 elections.

Saudi warns Europe of new terror threat

PARIS—Saudi intelligence services have warned of a new terror threat from al-Qaida against Europe, particularly in France, Interior Minister Brice Hortefeux said.

In an email Monday morning of a potential attack by al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula was received "in the last few hours, few days."

European officials were informed that al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula was planning a series of attacks, including being called "in the Third point continent, notably France," Hortefeux said during a joint TV and radio interview.

"The threat is real," he said on RTL radio. Figures weekly will show.

The warning from Saudi to this is the latest in a series of alerts that have put French security forces on alert in high-vigilance mode.

The Sept. 9, targeted, the international police organization, signed on "Islamic threat on a world scale, and security on the European continent," Hortefeux said without elaborating. That was followed by a Sept. 10 report of a woman suicide bomber who could take action in France, as projected fully credible.

Intelligence sources in North Africa also indicated France about a potential threat as did the United States, he said. He said he had spoken at length with US Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano.

It was the first time a French official had offered details about potential threat against September, when still, most, probably, involved this possibility that France could be a target of radical Islamic groups.

"We must not overestimate the threat, as underestimating it," the minister said. "We are directly concerned."

French officials are based at the head to train Muslim law enforcement.

The US State Department advised recent can citizens living or traveling in Europe earlier this month to take more precautions following reports that terrorism may be plotting attacks on a European city, possibly a shooting spree or other type of attack similar to the deadly 2008 Mumbai attacks in India.

France began boosting security last month as heavy mortar fires hit Paris from the east and the Gulf States, which were earlier evacuated after false claims of an attack. French authorities received their latest orders in the capital in September, including the two-attack killed Tuesday, a threshold in more than a year earlier. No explanation was found.

Speculation on the source of a potential terror threat has centered on al-Qaida in the Islamic Maghreb, another al-Qaida offshoot active in Algeria and Libya's Gaddafi's group, which took five French citizens hostage Sept. 14 in a heavily guarded training camp in Libya. Two soldiers from Iraq and Madagascar also were captured.

French fears that it could be a target of the Maghreb's affiliate of al-Qaida are based on their historic ties to the region, where it is a former colonial ruler, and severe rivalry caused by such things as the French law banning large ayatollahs to return. Al-Qaida had spoken against the measure before it became law. France also has soldiers in Afghanistan.

A threat from al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula would be unusual for France and Europe. The group is made up of radical Muslims from Yemen and Saudi Arabia who merged a year and a half ago.

However, the group has already planned to well to reach beyond the Middle East, claiming responsibility for the latest attempt to down a British-bound jetliner with a suicide bomber in December.

Al-Qaida uses English, Internet to get new jihadists

By BBC — Al-Qaida has continued the global reach of the English language and the Internet in cyber-recruitment tools to recruit new-suicide sympathizers.

Al-Qaida's French-based wing released the first edition of an online English-language magazine, Ummah, four months ago that included an article outlining its beliefs and goals.

A second, 74-page edition made it to the World Wide Web last week increasing from time to time countries on how to build deadly war. Media came 126 articles and their growth into civilian circles.

With Ummah, edited by al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP), the group hopes to attract young Westerners to the jihad cause and to apparently encourage readers to attack.

"This is by no means a new experience," he is "in the first time al-Qaida issues an English-language publication," a Paris-based expert on Middle East Islamic groups, the magazine Ummah, told AFP.

Philip holds a professor at the University of Southern California and co-author of "Global Terrorism and New Media," he believes the terror network has finally become a media organization.

"It might be time to stop thinking of al-Qaida as the terrorist organization that does media and more as the media organization that does terror," he told AFP.

Since the September 11, 2001 attacks on the United States, video, audio and written al-Qaida statements have made central on the Internet. Now the network has a complete web-presence in English.

"This has still" in al-Qaida's strategy, and thanks Allah, security experts at the Dubai-based think tank, the Gulf Research Center.

"Previously they were used only as Arabic speakers," this is global dissemination of a global war among its global network, he added.

Al-Qaida "imposed" Internet, now it "squeezes" them, it used the Internet in "Islamic" people, now it's using it in "Western" ones, Al-Qaida said.

Prime candidates for the authors of the new strategy are two al-Qaida-linked US citizens, Anwar al-Awlaki and Sami Khari, both of whom are believed to be in Yemen.

Awlaki, a 30-year-old American cleric at Yemeni al-Qaeda, has been studied in US army Major Khalid al-Muhammad al-Najjar (13 people in Yemen and in a Nigerian student accused of trying to blow up a US jetliner on Dec. 25).

The other American believed to be behind the strategy is Sami Khari, 32, an al-Qaida member, captured by US intelligence in 2001, he has been released who was reported to be a former prisoner in New York.

T-bill yields fall across the board

By Russell W. Darnage

TELLO (On the benchmark 91-day Treasury bill fell yesterday by 31.5 basis points to an average of 2.575 percent as investors dropped out of the bid.

Interest on the 182-day T-bill rose from 26.3 basis points to an average of 3.025 percent, while those for the 364-day bill decreased by 28.1 basis points to 4.234 percent. The Bureau of the Treasury raised a total of P7 billion in placed, with the government fully meeting the entire offer for all three tranches.

National Treasury Secretary R. Tito and undersecretary for treasury operations said the market continued to be deeply liquid.

"There have been a lot of portfolio shifts in the past week," Tito said, explaining that inflation was still "very good" as it stood at 3.3 percent in September.

The treasury also said yesterday it will do this week would only amount to P3 billion, adding to the ample supply of cash that would be received.

In yesterday's auction, offers for all three tranches were oversubscribed, with investors ready to lay out P5.85 billion on P3 billion worth of three-month T-bills on offer.

Bidders requested P15.56 billion against an offer of P2.3 billion for the six-month bill, and P13 billion for P3 billion worth of one-year dollar paper.

In total, investors bid 68 times the total offer of P7 billion.

Last month, the BDO announced plans to issue a total of P7.5 billion in debt paper in the fourth quarter, but about 70 percent of 3000 buyers in the previous quarter.

RP debt paper drops below global average

By Michelle K. Rana

LIQUIDITY on Philippine debt paper fell below global average by the end of the first half, as investors' growth prospects for the economy moved upward by the economy's forecasted performance.

The "BBB + Philippines" spread, which measures additional yield sought by investors when purchasing Philippine bonds instead of US Treasuries, reached 244 basis points by the end of June, down from 260 basis points last year.

This was narrower than the global average, or the "EMBI + Global spread," of 337 basis points.

The EMBI + Philippines spread is seen as a measure of the risk premium on the 10-year paper compared to the one-year paper.

It also indicated the year-over-year drop in the average spread on bond-investor transactions issued since the Philippines' entry in the international capital market market position by investors by the economy's prospects.

The government has set its 2013 official economic growth target at 5 to 6 percent, but economists believe that actual growth for 2013 will exceed that target as a result of the robust performance in the first half.

In the first semester of the year, the economy grew by 7.4 percent, the highest in over 30 years.
